

INVESTMENT OBJECTIVE

The Coronation Granite Plus Hedge Fund is managed as a long/short fixed income fund, investing in a diversified portfolio of securities, including derivative instruments, bonds and cash. The fund is expected to have low volatility with a very low correlation to the All Bond Index (ALBI). Investment decisions are driven by fundamental proprietary in-house research. The fund's target return is cash plus 4%. The objective is to achieve this return with low risk, providing attractive risk-adjusted returns through a low fund standard deviation.

The fund may make use of derivative instruments for efficient portfolio management purposes.

MONTHLY COMMENTARY

The Fund returned 1.5%* in May, taking the one-year return to 9.4%. This places the Fund 2.6% ahead of cash over 12 months.

The global macroeconomic landscape remained mired in uncertainty in May as the Middle East conflict and elevated energy prices continued to dominate the inflation narrative. Data released during the month confirmed that the energy shock was feeding into headline inflation across major economies, while underlying activity remained resilient, but less uniform. The coming months will be critical for assessing whether the energy-driven inflation spike proves transitory or triggers second-round effects that force central banks to tighten.

The South African Reserve Bank (SARB) raised policy rates by 25 basis points, moving the repo rate to 7.00% from 6.75% at the May Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) meeting. Governor Kganyago noted that hopes for a swift end to the Middle East conflict had faded, with oil fluctuating around US$100 a barrel, and that the SARB had lifted its 2026 inflation forecast to 4.4% from 3.7% in March and lowered its growth projections. The MPC reiterated its commitment to returning inflation to the 3% target over time. The SARB also flagged upside scenarios, which include a prolonged conflict, El Niño, and non-linear pass-through effects as potential catalysts for further tightening.

South African headline inflation jumped to 4.0% y/y in April from 3.1% y/y in March, while core increased to 3.6% y/y from 3.2% y/y. The fuel price surge was the main contributor to the uptick in inflation, while inflation in food and non-alcoholic beverages slowed. Services inflation picked up again, reflecting an acceleration in transport, funeral, insurance, and communications service costs. Core inflation firmed, suggesting that some indirect effects from higher operating and transport costs were starting to emerge.

SA duration has shifted from a story of stretched valuations and narrow upside to one of renewed opportunity borne out of geopolitical disruption. The Middle East conflict and the closure of the Strait of Hormuz have repriced risk across the curve, and in doing so, have restored a more appropriate margin of safety. Crucially, the domestic reform thesis, namely fiscal consolidation, contained inflation expectations, and SARB credibility remains fundamentally intact, even as the near-term inflation impulse from the oil shock clouds the path for monetary policy.

In this environment, one should favour the belly of the nominal yield curve, where carry and rolldown are most robust, and maintain selective exposure to front-end ILBs, where high real yields offer genuine inflation protection and superior risk-adjusted returns. The trajectory of the conflict will ultimately determine whether this repricing proves a compelling entry point or merely a waystation to further volatility.

For the Fund itself, interest rate volatility remained high during May, as wildly oscillating headlines and sentiment dictated risk appetite and macro-asset pricing. This was reflected across interest rate markets globally – both in monetary policy expectations, as well as long-dated real yields. The Fund's fine-tuned risk management approach adopted in prior weeks continued to prove its utility during May, as tactical opportunities did present themselves, but were often curtailed or outright reversed within days and even hours. The necessary extra nimbleness to navigate this – as well as a much more prudent use of the available risk budget – stood the Fund in good stead. In addition, some of the Fund's longer-held risk allocations, which had become temporarily dislocated during the market fall-out seen in March and April, had started to recover during May. While their medium-term prospects remain attractive, some of these exposures were trimmed into their recoveries to continue dampening the Fund's overall market risk in the face of an unresolved crisis in the Middle East. The longer this remains unresolved, the more probable for a non-linear step-shock to global growth through a more pronounced and destructive energy price shock. This potential risk outcome deserves particular watchfulness from Granite due to the potentially very large interest rate responses to such a scenario unfolding.

*The Fund return is net of expenses and gross of fees.
